BILL HAS A HIDDEN MEANING

CAREFUL perusal of the Harrington senate bill No. 3, which was introduced January 29 and which is undetermined as to its enactment, although already amended several times, is a dangerous document. It is known as the "blacklist" bill, but it uses simply that title to serve as a shield for other provisions which are positively vicious and dangerous, as affecting the relationship existing between employer and employee.

So far as the act prohibiting an employee, who was discharged for excellent cause, from becoming a menace to other employers, by reason of his lack of ability or his failure to respond to the "esprit de corps" which should prevail in every establishment, by "blacklisting" him when he is removed from his position, there arises a question of rights and privileges as between man and man, or, as the common law expressed it, between master and servant. This phase of the bill and its conclusions and effects will not be gone into by the Bonanza at this time. There is one section of the bill, however, which appeals strongly negatively to this paper and that is the one providing that in the event of an employee being discharged, the employer shall furnish him with a statement giving his name, position, place of employment, and a full statement of all grounds upon which said employer discharged, dismissed, removed or suspended said person, giving the employee one signed copy and retaining the other to keep on file.

The purpose of the act is to give the discharged, dismissed or suspended employee a standing in the courts of law for the purpose of bringing action for damages for removal from his position. In this respect the bill is bad, very bad. In nine cases out of ten, or ninety-nine out of one hundred, the dismissed employee would destroy the statement, because it would reflect upon his ability or loyalty, while it would give the minute minority an opportunity to sue for damages. On the other hand, the employee may leave the service of the employer without notice and give the latter no opportunity to collect damages, and damages may be as right and just in the one instance as the other, if it be true, as labor agitators claim, that the worker gives service equal to or greater than the compensation received. The Harrington bill has serious defects and should not be enacted in its present shape, or even with the amendments already proposed.

WILSON ASLEEP AT THE SWITCH

IF it were not for the overshadowing interest that attaches to the world war, the situation in Mexico would arouse the people of the United States to a feeling of more intense antagonism toward the administration, which has made of "watchful waiting" a by-word and a joke, to say nothing of the criminal neglect of life and property interests which it has entailed. A state of anarchy exists in Mexico, one of the most serious in the history of the world, inasmuch as it has arisen from and is being fostered by no patriotic impulse, no sense of duty to country, no allegiance to cause, no enthusiasm over propaganda, but a blind following of one leadership over another, which is without fixed aim. As a famous cartoonist describes the arrival and departure of each successive provisional president: "Here he comes; there he goes." The ignorant peons battle for a time under one flag, then under another. They do not know at times the significance of the banner they are following. But the leaders take turns in sipping from the treasury of the republic that was on the highway to prosperity when ruled by the rod of iron which distinguished its government a few years ago. Now, as one regime succeeds another so rapidly that it is impossible to even remember the names of the presidents that have occupied the chair in Mexico, the interests of Americans and those of other foreigners are leveled upon by the recurring administrations until they are practically pauperized, while the "gringos" are slain with impunity.

If the great war were not in progress, Germany, France and England would long ere this have violated the principles of the Monroe doctrine and they would have been fully authorized in doing so, for the United States assumed in promulgating this doctrine the authority and burden of protecting European interests in all the countries of the western hemisphere. When the history of the Wilson administration is written, it will be realized how sadly it has failed in this, as well as in other regards. "Watchful waiting" might properly be construed as "sleeping at the switch."

MEN WHO DO AND DARE

TO those of the mine rescue teams who responded to the alarm at the Belmont last night there should be given unstinted praise. It was feared at first that six of their fellow miners had been unable to make their way to the surface and the heroic work of rescuing human life as well as the preservation of property faced them. Happily the miners had all escaped and the fire was but an incipient one. However, that does not detract from the motives that influenced the men who donned the smoke helmets and were lowered into the depths of the earth on their errand of rescue. The Bonanza is pleased to present a list of the members of the crew who responded and will regret if any were omitted in the rush and confusion of the occasion.

A day or two ago the Bonanza republished a brief editorial from the Carson City Appeal without giving that paper credit. It was an unintentional oversight. Editorials and local stories printed in Nevada are rarely copyrighted, but there is an unwritten law, observed, we are sad to say, in the breach rather than the observance, which exacts that credits be given to the publications from which the editorials are news stories emanate. The Bonanza apologizes to the Appeal and will gratefully receive apologies from other state papers which make use of Bonanza articles as though they emanated from their own editorial or local staffs.

There is one unsatisfactory feature about these "notes" that are being exchanged between the United States and European powers relative to alleged violations of neutrality, seizure of cargoes, detaining ships and acts of espionage, et cetera. Cable tolls had to be paid on one recent "note" consisting of about 10,000 words.

Now that the heated term is approaching, how about jitney beers out on this great and droughty American desert?

LARGEST SOUP KITCHEN IN THE WORLD IS NOW ESTABLISHED AT BRUSSELS

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The soup kitchen organized in Brussels by the American commission for relief is now undoubtedly the largest in the world. Nearly fifty thousand people entirely destitute wait in the "bread lines" every day and over six thousand gallons of soup and four thousand kilograms of bread are daily distributed to them.

"Unlike the bread lines I have seen in America," says a report from one of the representatives in Brussels, "these are all people of one nationality and all with a common and undeserved misfortune. They are of all classes, but we know none of them save by number, because no matter what their station or the extent of their misfortune they still have a common purpose and many of them, if they were compelled to write their names on coupons when they get the soup would rather starve than take it. None of them think that they will always have to be in the bread lines and every one of them feels that when it is all over they will want to forget that they have been destitute."

"The soup for these pitiful victims and victims of war is all prepared in the large storehouses of the International Express company Van Gend. More than one hundred people are engaged in this work. Among them are former chefs of some of the leading hotels of Brussels, who give directions as to the kind and quality of the soup, its ingredients and their proportions. Under them are those who clean the vegetables—potatoes, carrots, beans, etc.—and prepare the meat. This entire staff is composed of volunteers except the chefs, who receive at the most half a crown a day.

"From three o'clock in the morning, when the cooking of the first 5,000 gallons of soup is started, the scene in the circus-like storehouse of the express company is one of tremendous activity with the moving figures of the hundred white-clad chefs, the fire abate under scores of immense cauldrons—all dimly seen through the shifting clouds of pungent steam rising from the boiling soup."

"When the soup is cooked it is sent, under the seals of the commission and under the protection of the American flag, in large lorries to the twenty-one canteens, scattered all over Brussels. These canteens were formerly schools, dance halls, Turkish baths, etc. During the morning, whenever one goes, women and children may be seen coming and going with pitchers of steaming soup and their ration of bread under their arms."
